

North and South Park are conducted by experts with no property or personal injury possible, we have found the public much pleased with this entertainment.

In the following groves, Oven Shelters have been constructed: Parish Hill and the Willows in North Park; Spreading Oak, Woodland Crest, Stone Manse and Edgebrook in South Park. They provide accommodations for large groups of park visitors, who often number several thousand in one gathering, making possible rainy-day picnics and afford opportunity to prolong the picnic day after sunset hours and enjoy outings at all times of the year.

An eighteen hole golf course has been constructed in South Park and nine holes have been completed in North Park. It is confidently hoped that the eighteen holes in South Park will be available for play this season, weather permitting, and that at least nine holes will be opened up for play later in the season in North Park.

The two courses, constructed by county employees, under my personal direction are of championship caliber in every respect, of regulation distance and every modern idea with respect to golf course construction has been considered and adopted where feasible, particularly the feature of safety to those playing on the two courses. Driveways encircle, but do not cross the courses anywhere.

The paramount concern in the building of these courses has been the factor of utmost safety to players, consistent with golf technique. Thus visibility is assured from tee to green, and in fact, from practically any position on any fairway.

Over three hundred thousand yards of soil have been moved on the course in South Park in order that this element of safety might be insured, at the same time providing necessary distances between tees and greens. Tons of rock have been blasted away in order to insure proper settings for many of the greens and to provide proper growing conditions for the grass. At the same time, the areas adjacent to tees, greens or fairways were graded in harmony with the golf course to carry out a feeling of sincerity and unity.
